Brittany Wells Chief Diversity and Inclusion Officer

Brittany Wells, 37, was named chief diversity and inclusion officer for Vogue in 2019. She supports diversity initiatives for both the editorial staff and within the pages of the publication. Prior to joining the Vogue team, Wells worked for three fashion publications. Her past roles include chief diversity officer for Harper's Bazaar, vice president of human resources for Elle, and director of human resources at Glamour.

Wells received a bachelor's degree in management sciences from UCLA, Berkeley. She then earned an MBA in human resource management from Harvard University, specializing in workplace diversity. Wells is a member of the Harvard University President's Diversity and Inclusion Commission, in addition to serving as chair of the National Congress of Black Women, Inc.

Living in Manhattan, Wells is happily married and is the mother of two children.
